Tori Thompson Peters
ENGL 3601.M50
Online, asynchronous

Technical & Professional Communication

ENGL 3601 gives students the opportunity to apply principles of technical writing and rhetoric to their own professional communication. The course provides tools for better understanding the audience, purpose, content, and design of communication so that students can develop skills in crafting effective and accessible writing for specific audiences. The course includes exploration of current theories in technical communication, analysis of communication in various fields, and application of technical communication principles to real-world examples related to students' fields of interest.