

Call for Abstracts: 12th Social Work Symposium

April 12, 2024
University of Memphis
Memphis, Tennessee

Social Work: Getting Back to Our Roots and Embracing the Community

The School of Social Work at the University of Memphis invites practitioners, students, and scholars at all levels in social work or related disciplines to submit abstracts for presentation during the symposium. Social Work has been on the forefront of community solutions to the problems that plague our world, from pandemics, to racism, to poverty, to a wide variety of ills. As a result, priority will be given to presentations that highlight the role of social work in engaging our communities and are true to our engagement and community action roots at all levels (neighborhood, city, state, country, world). We particularly seek presentations on evidence-based practice, cultural diversity, or ethics.

Submission Guidelines:

Abstracts must contain no more than 500 words. Submissions must also include three learning objectives (no more than 25 words each), a 50-word overview, and a 50-word bio for each author. Please submit your abstract here:
